Putrescence Cleaver

Weapon (Greataxe), Rare

Forged from the festering remains of the Putrescent Knight, this greataxe is less a weapon than a slab of rotting ruin. Its surface drips with black ichor, flecked with bone shards and rusted iron, each swing shedding filth that hisses as it touches the ground. The stench of decay heralds its wielder's approach long before the cleaver strikes.

You gain a +1 bonus to attack and damage rolls made with this weapon. Additionally, on a hit, the cleaver deals an additional 1d6 necrotic damage.

You also gain the following properties:

Rot's Hunger. When you reduce a creature to 0 hit points with this weapon, you can choose one hostile creature within 10 feet of the fallen target. That creature takes 2d6 necrotic damage.

Mass of Putrescence. As an action, you rip loose a lump of rancid filth, hurling it at a point you can see within 60 feet. The mass bursts, covering a 15-foot radius in vile sludge. Each creature in the area must succeed on a Dexterity saving throw (DC = 8 + your proficiency bonus + your Strength modifier) or take 3d8 bludgeoning + 3d8 necrotic damage and be poisoned until the end of its next turn. On a success, a creature takes half damage and is not poisoned. Once you use this property, you cannot use it again until you finish a long rest.
